Unfortunately, there is no sign of these emissions starting to fall rapidly but well-known companies tend to allure customers to rely on heavily by a provision of fossil fuels at lower prices. However, tonnes of carbon dioxide emitted into atmosphere every year are attributed to oil and gas burning, and global warming and sea level rising occurs. About the former, global warming has been regarded as one of the major threats to the environment because it releases extra heat and contributes to extreme weather condition. About the latter, if sea level continues to rise, a huge number of people in the world will eventually see their cities submerged, as a

	consequence. The little helps, but joint power is imperative. One single country that is engaged in such a project to reduce fossil fuels does something helpful, while involvement of international communities would take more effects, because fossil fuels consumption has been a global issue. Meanwhile, joint engagement refers to constant support, which would help to work out the issue more efficiently and effectively. In conclusion, it is urgent for international communities to reduce the amount of fossil fuels consumed.
